ABOUT THE BOOK

[*Read by the author - Frank Bruni] Year after year, high school seniors open rejection letters that destroy their confidence and lead them to believe they have failed at one of life's most critical junctures - something that has happened in so many American households with college-bound kids. While there are countless books teaching people how to identify and get into the colleges of their dreams, there's a deep need for dialogue questioning the intensity of those dreams, emphasizing that the college admissions moment isn't the most important in a lifetime, illustrating that college is what a student makes of it, and exhorting people to look at it in a different, less status-oriented way. Expanding on an April 2014 column titled, Our Crazy College Crossroads - which went viral, generated numerous emails to Bruni, and topped the most viewed and most emailed categories of the New York Read more
